Teacher script

Good morning, class. Today we are beginning our study of the French Revolution, a monumental event that began in 1789 and profoundly reshaped European politics and society. As we look at the origins of this period, we need to understand what triggered it. The causes included a severe fiscal crisis, deep inequality under the Ancien Regime, and the spread of Enlightenment ideas about rights and citizenship. Keep these core causes in mind as we explore how society was structured before the revolution took hold.

Additional activities

Causes Mapping Discussion (discussion)

Divide students into small groups. Ask each group to discuss and list the primary causes of the French Revolution based on the source material, focusing specifically on the fiscal crisis, inequality under the Ancien Regime, and Enlightenment ideas. Reconvene as a whole class to build a collective concept map on the board.

Key Events Timeline Role-Play (role_play)

Assign students or small groups to represent the key events of the French Revolution starting from 1789. Have them arrange themselves in chronological order and briefly act out or announce the significance of their assigned event to the rest of the class using only facts from the provided source material.

Global Legacy Analysis (other)

Instruct students to read the sections detailing how the Revolution abolished feudal privileges, challenged absolute monarchy, and influenced later democratic movements worldwide. Have them write a short reflective paragraph answering how these outcomes transformed European politics and society.

Learning gaps

Students may assume the French Revolution was caused solely by a sudden food riot or a single bad harvest rather than deep systemic issues under the Ancien Regime. [high]

Diagnostic: Which of the following best describes the primary causes of the French Revolution? A) A sudden bad harvest that lasted only a few weeks, B) Long-standing social inequality under the Ancien Regime combined with a severe fiscal crisis and Enlightenment ideas, C) A foreign invasion by Britain, D) A religious dispute between the Pope and the French king.

- Use a structural analogy like a pressure cooker to explain how deep-seated fiscal crises and estate inequalities built up over decades before 1789.
- Review the social structure of the Three Estates to show systemic inequality.

Students may believe that the French Revolution completely and instantly established a stable, long-lasting democratic republic throughout Europe without any resistance or absolute monarchy returns. [medium]

Diagnostic: True or False: The French Revolution immediately ended all forms of absolute monarchy in Europe forever and created a lasting peaceful democracy in France starting in 1789. Explain your reasoning in one sentence.

- Provide a brief worked timeline showing that the revolution challenged absolute monarchy and abolished feudal privileges, but also faced immense internal and external struggles.
- Emphasize the difference between challenging a system and completely establishing permanent global democratic stability overnight.

Students might confuse Enlightenment ideas with the defense of absolute monarchy and divine right of kings. [medium]

Diagnostic: How did Enlightenment ideas influence the outbreak of the French Revolution? A) They encouraged people to support absolute monarchy and divine right, B) They promoted concepts of individual rights, equality, and citizenship that challenged the Ancien Regime, C) They argued that only the clergy should pay taxes, D) They had no impact on political thought in 1789.

- Reteach key Enlightenment principles focusing on rights, social contracts, and citizenship versus divine right.
- Have students match specific Enlightenment quotes to demands for equality.
